

Comment on suggestions 68

Although it seems imprudent to comment on a redistricting submission that wasn't submitted, I cannot allow the public posting – and leaking to a child-run news service – by the Liberal party of egregious and puerile humour inappropriate in the serious democratic business of electoral redistricting. To take advantage of such innocents, for what is obviously an attempt to bring disdain on the whole process and gain notoriety with “the youth”, is an outrage.

Not only drawing something of that shape, but then leaning into it – hard – with the name. Clearly the Liberal party is working to denigrate the process and lower the standing of our democratic institutions. No wonder they didn't submit to the AEC!

I call on the Redistribution Committee to denounce this undergraduate humour if the Liberal party tries to submit its leaked proposal as a “comment on suggestions”.

If, as indifferent bureaucrats, you do republish the Liberal proposition, please include a warning about its phallic contents to protect unsuspecting others from offence.
